From the Website (www.cortezmasto.senate.gov):

Before being elected to the U.S. Senate, Senator Catherine Cortez Masto spent her career fighting to protect Nevada families. Cortez Masto served two terms as Nevada’s Attorney General, where she fought to combat drug crime, protect seniors, take on the big banks, and worked to strengthen laws preventing sex trafficking and violence against women.

Prior to her service as Attorney General, Cortez Masto worked as an Assistant County Manager for Clark County. She also served as a federal criminal prosecutor for the U.S. Attorney’s Office in Washington, D.C. and was Chief of Staff to Governor Bob Miller.

Cortez Masto currently resides in Las Vegas, Nevada with her husband, Paul.

From the Website (https://www.rosenfornevada.com/):
Jacky Rosen has lived in Nevada for nearly 40 years. She is the granddaughter of immigrants and grew up in a working class family. As the first in her family to graduate from college, Jacky worked two jobs and took out student loans to make ends meet. When Jacky started her career as a computer programmer and software developer, she worked as a banquet waitress to pay her bills. She broke barriers in the male-dominated tech industry, working for major companies in Nevada. Jacky led a team to construct one of the largest solar arrays in Henderson through a public-private partnership.

In 2016, Jacky ran for Congress in Nevada’s highly competitive 3rd District because she saw an opportunity to make a difference for her community. In the House, she’s been rated one of the most bipartisan members. Jacky (was) a member of the Problem Solvers Caucus, working across party lines to find common ground and deliver results for Nevadans. She has been a champion for encouraging early childhood education in STEM, especially for young girls.
