In 2019, Florida ranked fifth in the nation, sending 341 Peace Corps Volunteers overseas. Over the past decade, Florida regularly ranked among the top ten states in sending volunteers abroad, often ranking in the top five.

The University of Florida ranked ninth among large colleges and universities in sending Peace Corps Volunteers overseas in 2019. Among small colleges and universities, Eckerd College ranks ninth in the country. Among graduate school programs, the University of South Florida ranked third in sending volunteers abroad in 2019.

Florida is home to five National Peace Corps Association affiliate groups, at work in Tampa Bay, Jacksonville, Miami, Sarasota, and Tallahassee.

TCP Global, started by several South Florida Volunteers, has expanded considerably. As of August 2019, it sent $116,000 to over twenty partners administering micro-loans in eight countries, and has supported 2,800 loans valued at $596,000. In addition, those programs have generated $107,000 for community projects.

In 2018 and 2019, members of the Jacksonville-based First Coast Returned Peace Corps Volunteers (RPCVs) have been organizing community dinners to connect neighbors and friends with local refugees to build understanding about the refugee experience.

"Living in another culture for two years was an unforgettable experience. I think it has given me more tolerance and understanding of those who are different from me. I have continued to be a volunteer in other ways since returning. It seems to be in my nature. I was a Big Sister for several years to a 12-year-old. She is now 46, and we are still in touch!"
